Family activities

Teddy can come home and be a part of everyday life. Why not use themes during the year taken from the Teddy packs, like holidays or traditions. Teddy can also help with reminding the kids to say thank you, please, etc. Small stories from things that happen at home are also interesting to share.

Teddy team kids

Photos or small films with Teddy: dress him up, sing with him, play with him, take him with you to visit, trips, outings to places or birthdays. Give him a personality clothes and things. Make things for him: sew, cut out or knit. He can also watch while you swim, play or ride your bike. Learn to write small sentences in English: I like to play with Teddy etc. Older children can read Teddy stories on film to younger children or they can write their own Teddy stories.

More thoughts for Teddy's Facebook page and website

Everyone who is interested in language learning, please post on this webpage. Would be wonderful if Teddy reached out and helped children who don't have access to much, so that they also can also learn

English. I'm going to put on films with ideas of how to teach these themes, so it's easy to see what to do and get ideas.

Learning English with Teddy should be easy and fun for everyone

Introducing Teddy into homes across the world and having him experiencing different traditions and cultures will bring a greater understanding of how people live their lives in different cultures. I'm a great believer in beginning with young children to lay a foundation for understanding, and storytelling is a wonderful way for children to come together. That way we get the point across that people are different and live differently, but not always that differently. This makes us less fearful of the unknown. English is a world language and everyone should have access to learning it when they are young. All children have untapped potential, and with Teddy this potential can be realised.

Sincerely
Julie Monsen
